Special Issue on Social Behavior and Psychology

Call for Papers

Social Behavior and Psychology is an interdisciplinary field examining how individuals' thoughts, feelings, and behaviors are influenced by social interactions. It explores the complex interplay between individual minds and the social context, encompassing topics such as social cognition, attitudes, group dynamics, social influence, interpersonal relationships, and identity. By understanding these psychological aspects of social interactions, the field aims to elucidate human behavior in social settings, contributing to applications in various societal and individual well-being domains.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Social Behavior and Psychology. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Social perception, cognition and behavior
- Cognitive processes and social interactions
- Interpersonal relationship
- Group dynamics
- Prosocial behavior
- Aggression and violence
- Social influence and norms
- Social identity
- Cultural and cross-cultural psychology
- Emotion and social psychology
- Socialization and developmental psychology
