Special Issue on Macroeconomic Theory and Policy

Call for Papers

Macroeconomics is a branch of economics dealing with the performance, structure, behavior, and decision-making of an economy as a whole. This includes regional, national, and global economies. Macroeconomists study aggregated indicators such as GDP, unemployment rates, national income, price indices, and the interrelations among the different sectors of the economy to better understand how the whole economy functions. They also develop models that explain the relationship between such factors as national income, output, consumption, unemployment, inflation, saving, investment, energy, international trade, and international finance.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Macroeconomic Theory and Policy. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- GDP study
- Supply and demand
- Tax and fiscal policy
- Capital and investment
- Consumption and savings
- Financial crisis
- Money and inflation
- Macroeconomic policy and unemployment
- Output and employment
- Macroeconomics and public finance
- Business cycles
- Macroeconomic fluctuations and policies
- General equilibrium theory
- International finance and trade
- Banking in macroeconomic theory and policy

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Macroeconomic Theory and Policy” should be chosen during your submission.
